Tuesday, February 19. 1706.

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated Feb. 23.

Frankfort, Feb. 10.

THE Deputies of the Circle of the upper Rhaine, assembled in this City, have nominated Colonel Hofman, who is in the Service of the Landgrave of Hesse Darmstadt and Sub-Governour of Landau, to be Major General of the Troops of their Circle. 3 Prussian Battalions, amounting to 1600 Men, are arriv'd at Donawerth, and are to continue their march to Landstberg, Weilheim, and Schungau; where they are to rest some Days, and then pursue their march for Italy.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated Feb. 23.

Ratisbon, Feb. 15. The general Amnesty that was publish'd at Munich the 5th of this Month, enjoyns the revolted Bavarians that have return'd or shall return to their Dwellings, to carry their Arms to the arsenals in Munich, Landshut, Straubingen, and Burghausen, within 8 Days; but 'tis much doubted they will not all pay punctual Obedience to this Order, 'tis rather believ'd that many of them have Thoughts of rising again in the Spring, and that they entertain Hopes the French will send them Succours then. 'Tis advis'd, that at the Request of the Archbishop of Salzburg, all the revolted Bavarians that retir'd into his Dioceess are included in the fore-said general Amnesty, particularly the Count de Baumgarten and Baron Prielmeyer, Ministers of the Elector of Bavaria, who were the Chief Promoters of the Revolt.

From the Amsterdam Courant, dated Feb. 23.

Neurenberg, Feb. 16. All is quiet now in Bavaria; but the Peasants are tax'd at 200000 Florins, for paying the Troops of Wurtemberg that march'd into that Electorate to assist in suppressing the Revolt. The Fortifications of Braunau and Scharding will be quite demolish'd. A great number of Recruits for the Imperial Troops are rais'd in our Neighbourhood and in Bavaria. The Prussian Regiments, that are arriv'd on the Lech and are design'd for Italy, are to halt till they have Notice from Tirol that the necessary Stores of Provisions are got ready for their Subsistance in their march through that Province.

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated Feb. 19.

Haguenau, Feb. 8. The Enemy having caus'd a Detachment of Foot and Hussars to take Possession of the Abbey of Neuwiller, within a League of Ingweiler; the Count de Gallo, Major of the Regiment of Merci, went t'other Day to view what Posture they were in, with 200 Horse and 50 Hussars, and met the Enemy's Hussars, who fled before him into the Place. We know not whether the Enemy's Design be to fortify that Abbey, or only to cover the Convoys that come from Lorrain: That Post makes a Triangle with Saverne and Lichtenberg, and may easily be succour'd from either of those Places. The Count de Fries has sent Advice to Prince Lewis of Baden of the Enemy's having possess'd themselves of the said Abbey; and 'tis believ'd a Detachment will be order'd to dislodge them.

Haguenau, Feb. 12. The French have made no Motion against us, because of the bad Weather; but Deserters from them report, that they continue to make great Preparacions for some Enterprize; which in all probability is to attempt to succour Fort Louis; we therefore on our side keep carefully on our Guard, that we may not be surpriz'd.

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated Feb. 23.

Haguenau, Feb. 15. The French fortify Neuwiller; whereupon 4 pieces of Cannon are sent to Ingweiler, and 4 others to Pfaffenhoven, for the greater Security of those Places. Yesterday 16 Deserters arriv'd here, and in the Evening 2 Drummers brought hither from Strasbourg several German Soldiers that have been exchang'd. The Enemy continue to make great Magazines in these Parts, that they may be able to take the Field early.

From the Paris Gazette, dated February 20.

Strasbourg, Feb. 10. Great Diligence is us'd to store the Magazines of this City, and of other Places in Alsace, with Ammunition, Corn, Meal, Oats, and Forrage, brought from Lorrain and the Franche Comte. The taking up a great Number of Waggon's for this Service, and the Motions made by the Troops to guard the Convoys, have so alarm'd the Enemy, who thought we would attack their Places or endeavour to raise the Blockade of Fort Louis, that the Garrison of Haguenau were 2 Days and Nights under Arms; and they being diminish'd by Distempers that carry off 8 or 10 Soldiers a Day, 500 Men have been sent to reinforce them, as have also 250 to reinforce the Garrison of Drusenheim which is provided with some Cannon for its greater Security. Prince Lewis of Baden has sent Order to the Troops of the Circles of Swabia and Franconia to hold themselves in a Readiness to march; and the Duke of Wurtemberg apprehending an Irruption would be made into his Country, is return'd thither and is follow'd by the Troops he had led into Bavaria. They write from Frankfort the 4th that the 2 Regiments of Palatines in the Pay of Holland that have their Winter Quarters in the Neighbourhood of that City, had receiv'd Order to march to Bavaria to joyn the 2 other Palatine Regiments that are there, and then march together for Italy.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated February 23.

Hanover, Feb. 19. The Queen of England's Birthday was celebrated here with great Splendor and Magnificence by Brigadier General How, her Majesty's Envoy extraordinary: At 6 a Clock that Evening, the Electore's Dowager went to that Minister's House, with the Electoral Prince and his Princess, the Electoral Princess, the Margrave of Anspach, &c. The Entertainment was open'd with a Ball, which lasted till 10 a Clock; and then Supper was serv'd up; after which the Ball was renew'd till 1 a Clock; when the Court return'd to the Palace.
